Organization No: 4715

Description/Analysis:

Issue:

In Fall 2005, the Mayor appointed a Commission on Sacramento Youth to recommend appropriate policies and actions the City can undertake to make Sacramento a youth-friendly city (Commission Members are listed in Attachment A).

The first issue addressed by the Commission was to propose how pre-school aged children in Sacramento could have access to exceptional quality pre-school programs. The Commission identified a number of recommendations and actions the City could undertake to support planning and implementation efforts to maximize the opportunity to serve all of our pre-school children. On May 23, 2006 the Mayor and City Council endorsed the recommendations presented and in a number of instances, City staff has been able to facilitate and/or support the implementation of a number of the recommendations. One significant example is that staff from both the Parks and Recreation and Development Services Departments are active participants with other governmental agencies and community organizations in streamlining the permitting and other related processes for the development of home and/or center child care facilities.

Following the above, the work of the Commission has focused on the needs of Sacramento youth, the services and programs currently available to meet those needs and the identification of gaps in service delivery as well the organizational environment in which various governmental and non-profit organizations address the needs and gaps. The Commission heard from school superintendents, staff of non-profit organizations serving youth and youth themselves as the basis for the Commission's development of the "Sacramento Agenda for Youth".

Sacramento Agenda for Youth 07

Recommendations from the Mayor's Commission
FEBRUARY

Who:	The defined target audience is youth 12-18, particularly those who find it difficult to access the “system”.
Why:	We believe that youth are an integral part of the future success of the City of Sacramento and that the City should do everything possible to provide an infrastructure of support and resources to ensure that youth are successful. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>○ Sacramento is the most diverse community in the country – there is value in understanding other groups in the country.</li> <li>○ Safe places can be used to foster positive connections among youth.</li> <li>○ The long term health of the governance system is dependent on an influx of educated, informed youth.</li> <li>○ There is a need to educate the community about the importance and value of youth leadership.</li> </ul>
What:	The attached matrix provides an overview of a multi-year agenda designed to make Sacramento a “youth-friendly” city, supporting our youth to be ready for life as they graduate from high school and enter post-secondary education and/or the world of work. This agenda shall be supported and supplemented by a youth survey undertaken biennial to identify current needs and appropriate recommendations as well as a mapping of current youth assets.

- How:
- Discussing, validating and implementing the matrix is a multi-step process.
  - The Sacramento Commission on Youth will meet with the Sacramento Youth Commission to present and discuss the recommendations.
  - Agenda for Youth presented to the Mayor and the City Council in February.
  - Adoption of some or all of the agenda would then be followed by an implementation plan and strategy including a funding proposal.
  - Currently, there is no individual or department whose sole responsibility is to improve the lives of youth in the city. Placing an individual in the Mayor's Office with this responsibility would be a start. Roles and responsibilities would include increasing innovation, increasing the effectiveness of current programs, and leveraging current and future opportunities. A Division or Department of Youth over time is a long-term possibility.
  - The city should create a systematic infrastructure that would bring together the city, school districts and all other youth providers in a regular way to do joint planning and create joint projects both on the capital and program sides.
